Dear Aaron Trujillo,

I know that you are aware of the reason I am writing this letter to you. I just wanted to say sorry about our fight last time. But, during such periods, our love is being tested and also its strength. In such moments, God also wants to check whether we truly love each other. There are situations when we must stay strong and absorb the learning coming and that to become better. I will always value this little argument we had because I understood that it is just to make us miserable and I don't want us to be so. It has definitely fortified our bond of love and has made us even closer than ever. I am really sorry; please consider this fight as a time for us to improve for the future. Also, I love you so much.

Yours,

Elmo Lopez
