Dear Tiger Shroff,

Hi! It's been long that we were reminded of each other, but, I am writing to you because there have been unsaid things between us, which have been troubling from quite some time now. Our marriage happened on ----
----- and thus began our beautiful journey together and we loved each other deeply. There have been many moments of love, laughter, joy, and fights as well. But, the situation was out of hand when those fights turned into misunderstandings and we started to ignore each other and not face each other. Lack of communication and ----- (mention other reasons as well) became the reasons for fighting with each other and not understanding each other points of view. The first time that we fought madly was when ----- (explain the situation) after that also it was repeated many times and we still have a chance to each other, but lastly the ending point was on ----- (mention the date) and we just separated and then there was no coming back. I have realized where I went wrong in that situation and would like to apologize to you. Though I know that it's been late to apologize, it will still give me the satisfaction and a realization that I have told you what I am feeling. I hope that you will consider my apology and will forgive me for whatever happened between us. I will be waiting for your response and wish you good luck in the future.

Yours lovingly ex-wife,
