My lovely Mom,

Mom, my world revolves around you and my motive of sending you this letter is to say sorry to you for the wrong behavior that I showed you last week. Over the days, I have realized that I did hurt you badly and you are upset with me at this point of time. I know that you care for me and so, you have always told me to control my anger and try to avoid being a shirt tempered individual. When you started shouting at me for not informing you when I went out, I lost my temper and shouted back at you. It is indeed very bad on my part. I should not have done so. Now I repent for what I have done.

Being my mom, I hope you will understand my emotions and what I feel and you will forget about what I have done and forgive my behavior. I promise you that I will not repeat this behavior again and will try to overcome my anger and short temper habit. I will become a better human being with time and you will certainly see a change in me.

Please write back to me so that I feel better.

Yours lovingly
